Our Story

The product of the Sakhu Project is a new culturally grounded provider training curriculum and model African American treatment plan that is based on African American cultural substance. This curriculum will assist in improving services appropriate to the African American community. The Sakhu Project will allow community-based providers the ability to utilize a mutually interactive application of African wisdom traditions, history, culture, philosophy, and deep thought in the delivery of mental health services to African American clients/consumers.

The Sakhu Project is a call to stop doing the same thing over and over again and expecting a different outcome. In working effectively with African American clients and consumers, having an appreciation for the specific cultural nuances associated with this cultural template is important. The way African Americans think, the meaning we give to our experiences and what we do everyday is reflected in our cultural metaphors. Understanding the cultural metaphors and nuances that represent the underlying values, beliefs and behaviors is essential to the development of new and innovative culturally grounded approaches to mental health.

The Sakhu Project incorporated and utilized African and African American culture and thought in the “illumination” of culturally congruent well-being and wholeness in the planning and delivery of behavioral health care services to African American people.

Project Abstract
“Sakhu: An African American Provider Training Curriculum - Incorporating the Illumination of Culturally Congruent Well-being and Wholeness”, in title and approach, is designed to intentionally incorporate and utilize African and African American culture and thought in the “illumination” of culturally congruent well-being and wholeness in the planning and delivery of behavioral health care services to African American people.

This Project, was designed to specifically answer the learning question: What are the cultural and spiritual nuances, beliefs, practices and norms specific to the African American community that should be incorporated into the planning, delivery, and outcomes of mental health and co-occurring conditions services for this community? The Sakhu project, in the form of an “innovative” culturally grounded provider training curriculum has attempted to: (1) Identify the specific cultural nuances, metaphors, values, beliefs, and behaviors essential to the development of new and innovative culturally grounded approach to mental health; (2) Create an overall Sakhu Prevention/Intervention and Treatment plan for working with African American populations; (3) Design and develop the practical components for the use of African and African American culture, as well as, African centered thought and Black Psychology in Behavioral Health Care services with African American people; (4) Develop a culturally grounded African American Prevention/ Intervention and Treatment (P/I-T) Protocol that identifies the (a) critical knowledge base, (b) requisite cultural congruency, and (c) demonstrable performance mastery.

Preface
Funded by the Alameda County Behavioral Health Care Services’ (BHCS) Grant #: 2INN81-L1, “Sakhu: An African American Provider Training Curriculum - “Incorporating the Illumination of Culturally Congruent Well-being and Wholeness” project was designed to utilize the Institute’s long history as a community-based, nonprofit Black “think-tank” and scientific, educational training and research corporation that specializes in the scientific educational and cultural aspects of family life and human development to develop age-based, culturally-informed provider training curriculum designed to improve effectiveness of behavioral health care services to African American Behavioral Health Care Services (BHCS) clients/consumers and their families that has been ‘field tested’ and evaluated by BHCS clients/consumers, family members and Alameda County and its contracted community-based providers.

Alameda County Behavioral Health Care Services (BHCS) MHSA Innovation Grant Program funding is intended to provide mental health systems with an opportunity to learn from innovative approaches. Alameda County Behavioral Health Care Services (BHCS) invited members of the community to present fresh and new projects to be funded as Innovation Projects. Innovation Projects were directed to introduce a novel, creative, and/or ingenious approach to a variety of mental health practices that contributed to learning at any point across the spectrum of an individual or family’s needs relating to mental health, from prevention and early intervention to recovery supports.
Introduction
The Institute for the Advanced Study of Black Family Life and Culture is a community-based organization committed to enhancing the development and lives of Black Families. The Institute has been in the West Oakland community for over 30 years providing programs to promote the educational, social, and cultural experiences of Black children, youth, and families. With this history, the Institute is grateful to BHCS for vision to call for systemic change in its' response to the multi-cultural fabric of the community it serves.

“Sakhu: An African American Provider Training Curriculum - Incorporating the Illumination of Culturally Congruent Well-being and Wholeness” has taken seriously the full range of possibility of innovative projects that can contribute to new learning relative to mental health. Grounded in the intellectual research and scholarship of the Institute, this curriculum has been developed and crafted through the insights, expertise and opinions of African American consumers, their families, contract providers, senior Black Psychologists and cultural brokers/experts. The results of this exercise in innovation has gone beyond addressing the singular question of, “What are the cultural and spiritual nuances, beliefs, practices and norms specific to the African American community that should be incorporated into the planning, delivery, and outcomes of mental health and co-occurring conditions services for this community?” While addressing that specifically and providing valuable identification and strategies for utilizing African American metaphors, norms and customs in the delivery of mental health services, this curriculum went beyond the scope of work. The provider-training curriculum produced provides Alameda County Behavioral Health Care Services the opportunity to interrogate the limitations of the existing discipline supporting its practice and explore a new frontier in the field of psychology that is directly supporting of culturally congruent PEI practice.

In our opinion, we have gone beyond the contract expectation in this service to the County. This curriculum and the provider training it is designed to guide has the potential to not only assist BHCS in achieving system-wide Quality Improvement Services to the African American community, it will give license to and set a standard for truly multi-cultural service and locate Alameda county as the forerunner and national leader in behavioral health care services.

Paradigm Shift: African Centered

The proposed Sakhu Project is a call to stop doing the same thing over and over again and expecting a different outcome. In working effectively with African American clients and consumers, having an appreciation for the specific cultural nuances associated with this cultural template is important. What has greater importance, especially for diagnosis and/or differential diagnoses and culturally grounded treatment is the ability to detect, appreciate and utilize the “nuanced” expressions within African American culture and the utilization of cultural “metaphors” and “ethos” that help to give meaning to behavior. The way African Americans think, the meaning we give to our experiences and what we do everyday is reflected in our cultural metaphors. Understanding the cultural metaphors and nuances that represent the underlying values, beliefs and behaviors will be essential to the development of new and innovative culturally grounded approaches to mental health. The unquestionable innovation of the proposed Sakhu Project is that it will be guided by a longstanding and deep understanding of African American culture as both a “skill set” and a “paradigmatic prism.” As cultural prism, it will assist mental health practitioners in understanding and interpreting what is a clarification and what is a distortion in the lived experiences of African American people. The Sakhu Project will explore, design and develop a new culturally grounded provider-training curriculum.

Theoretical and Philosophical Foundation

The question of African American culture helps us to understand the “distinction” of being African American. Being “distinct” is not the same as being “different”. Understanding what makes a thing distinct requires an exploration and analysis of its nature, attributes, qualities, features, etc. Too often the understanding of African American human functioning was attempted by comparing African American life with that of White American life. African American life and living is grounded in both environmental conditions and a complex structure of cultural precepts, virtues, values, customs, themes and prerequisites. These traditional African American cultural components serve as the crucial (more often than not disregarded and misunderstood in Mental Health services) African American cultural template. Sakhu Sheti/Djaer emerged from the work of the Institute as a further refinement and deeper extension of Black Psychology’s African essence. Sakhu Sheti/Djaer is the process of understanding, examining, and explicating the meaning, nature and functioning of being human for African people by conducting a deep, profound and penetrating search, study and mastery of the process of “illuminating” the human spirit or essence, as well as all human experiences and phenomena. The Sakhu curriculum design will have a dual focus. It will be designed to (1) serve as a tool used to provide training to improve the “culturally grounded services” of existing non-African American county and contracted community service providers and (2) increase availability and greater involvement of “culturally congruent services” with African American service providers. In resulting in a radically new and innovative skill set, the Sakhu Project will allow County and contracted community-based providers the ability to utilize a mutually interactive application of African wisdom traditions, history, culture, philosophy and deep thought.
Contextual Grounding: The Need for Radical Change

Alameda Call for Innovation

Provide the mental health system with an opportunity to learn from innovative approaches

Our Values

- Collaborative partnerships with consumers, families, service providers, agencies and communities
- Support and encourage consumers and their families to exercise their authority to make decisions, choose from a range of available options and to develop their full capacity to think, speak and act effectively in their own interest
- Clinical excellence through the use of best practices, evidence-based practices, effective outcomes, including prevention and early intervention strategies, to promote well-being and an optimal quality of life.
- Honor the voices, strengths, leadership, languages and life experiences of ethnically and culturally diverse consumers and their families across the lifespan. We value operationalizing these experiences in our service settings, treatment options, and in the processes we use to engage our communities.
- Advocacy and education to eliminate stigma, discrimination, isolation and misunderstanding of persons experiencing mental illness and substance use disorders.
- Social inclusion and the full participation of consumers and family members to achieve fuller lives in communities of their choice, where they can live, learn, love, work, play and pray in safety and acceptance.

Recommendation, partial list:

- Adopt community-based consultations by calling on expert(s) from the consumer’s community to provide insight into a specific behavior, symptom and possible influencers or triggers, prior to assigning a diagnosis.
Sakhu: An African American Provider Training Curriculum

- Solicit input from the consumer and family members and include them in treatment planning.

California Department of Mental Health

“We Ain’t Crazy, Just Coping with a Crazy System: Pathways into the Black Population for Eliminating Mental Health Study Disparities” documents lack of access in Black population. The Report articulated 274 PEI practices, strategies, and recommendations.

Partial list:

- “Seek to heal the whole person instead of addressing various symptoms.
- Mandate culturally congruent mental and emotional assessments to determine needs.
- Establish a set of culturally grounded principles for the Black population and fund only programs and interventions that utilize them.
- Establish oversight and accountability with community appointed “African American Mental Health Community Commissions” in each county
- Establish a funding system that allows community based organization to successfully partner with government on community defined practices, and fund neighborhood mental health prevention efforts for sustainability over time.
- Fund existing culturally grounded congruent integrated programs, projects and practices.
- Support statewide culturally congruent crisis level spirituality interventions.
- Establish a Black care paradigm and certify professionals in culturally congruent mental health care.
- Advocate for and financially support initiatives for positive image of Black culture.

Redefining the Definition of an African American Community Defined Practice

- “The issue of access, funding application, governing policy, implementation procedures as well as assessment and evaluation, including the actual instruments, i.e. forms, tone, etc. to record and document the experience should all be equally held to the requirement of African American cultural congruency.”
Contract Provider Focus Group Summary

- There needs to be a buy in from the county. How invested is the county in this?
- The training needs to be deep and dirty. May have to do some shaming the same way it was needed to roll out the co-occurring disorders.
- Culturally specific training for African American people is needed.

Consumer and Families Focus Group Summary (4/11/13)

- so I really think the system does a disservice to African Americans there when you just really set your foot down, because I don’t believe that...that you know if a people are coming to access health care and are continuitous (?) with that and are going along with whatever the higher program is
- , I think there’s a disconnect between...culture and...and what happens in the experience of getting care you know whether it’s in a medical setting or whether it’s in a...a clinic and...um..
- -- most people are very uncomfortable having to sit in the presence of a person that have visible signs of mental illness, you couple that with being white as a therapist and being Black I mean even if you’re not a therapist, I mean just the Black-white relationship, white people are uncomfortable in the presence of Black people when you put a mental issue there, it’s a total uncomfortability

Learning Question One:

“What are the cultural and spiritual nuances, beliefs, practices and norms specific to the African American community that should be incorporated into the planning, delivery, and outcomes of mental health and co-occurring conditions services for this community?”
Curriculum Training Approach

The specific approach for the training associated with “The Sakhu Project: Incorporating the Illumination of Culturally Congruent Well-being and Wholeness” curriculum framework will be African Centered and designed as a structurally interlocking learning/development experience that builds on the application of African American cultural orientation and mutually reinforcing training techniques. The three interlocking mutually reinforcing training techniques are as follows:

1. Instruction/Discussion (didactic, provocative and inspirational)
   - The systematic introduction and discussion of basic ideas and background information
   - Format: Lecture and Discussion

2. Experiential/Applications
   - The intentional arrangement of interactional learning situations that are designed as applications of specific concepts, ideas and/or experiences designed to demonstrate levels of mastery
   - Format: Structured Experiences and Interactions

3. Mock Clinical Trials (Demonstration/Performance)
   - The appropriation (reproduction) of simulated scenarios reflective of real world possibilities
   - Format: Small Group, Role Playing, Development Team Interactions and Exercises

Curriculum Framework

“The Sakhu Project Culturally Grounded Provider Training Curriculum” consists of five 2-hours sessions. Through its training, “The Sakhu Project Culturally Grounded Provider Training Curriculum” will connect providers with positive aspects of African and African American culture and traditions; ways in which to incorporate cultural nuances in the delivery of mental health services to African American populations.

Module Objectives

The objectives of The Sakhu Project Culturally Grounded Provider Training Curriculum are to:

- Connect service providers with positive aspects of African and African American culture and traditions
- Improve the capacity and ability of existing county and contracted community service providers to deliver
“culturally-grounded services” to African American populations
• Increase the availability and greater involvement of African American service providers with the delivery of “culturally congruent services” to African American populations

Each “Module” will be supported by intentionally selected guiding proverbs, a thought for the day, music, films, study materials, and reading assignments.
